ABSTRACT

The present invention refers to a method of producing a coated substrate comprising the steps of:

- a) forming a free flowing curtain, the curtain having at least one component capable of reacting, and
 - b) contacting the curtain with a continuous web substrate.